

BlackRock, Inc. (NYSE: BLK)One Asset, Two Lenses

W.H. Blackburn · June 2026

HOLDTarget $959Price ~$1,050to fair value -8%*Thesis

BlackRock is two companies wearing one ticker. As a rate-sensitive asset manager it is worth ~$825; as a platform compounder — Aladdin's software economics plus private-market cash flows that don't track equities one-for-one — it is worth ~$959. The evidence leans to the platform lens (in 2022, operating income fell ~13% against a ~19% market drop). But at ~$1,050 the market is paying above even that optimistic read.

Variant perception

- Consensus: Buy, targets ~$1,150–1,250; private-market cash flows treated as already durable; Aladdin earns a software multiple.
- My view: Directionally right on quality, but the market is pricing a durability the March/June 2026 private-credit redemption gates have not yet earned. I sit below the Street and below the price.

Catalysts (next 12–24 months)

- Q2 earnings (Jul 21): flow durability and private-credit redemption commentary.
- Quarterly Aladdin ACV — confirms or breaks the platform thesis; watch the sub-mid-teens line.
- Private-credit redemptions and the Fed path under Warsh (rates biased up).

Key risks

- Equity drawdown on the AUM-linked book (~$150/sh per 20% market decline).
- Private-credit stress / further gating — the live threat to the premium.
- Sustained higher rates compressing both the market and the multiple.

Recommendation

HOLD. Skew is unfavorable at today's price (~+9% to the bull vs. ~-21% to the bear). Hold existing positions through volatility; accumulate in the high-$900s, where the two lenses converge and the margin of safety reappears. Trim above ~$1,150.

Academic exercise; not investment advice. Data mid-June 2026. Full SOTP model and core narrative accompany this memo.